

Men of Many Faiths

TODAY the World rejoices. From countless spires chime the joyful bells. The first flowers of Spring are heaped upon a thousand altars. Men of many faiths give thanks to the God of their Fathers for a world re-born.

Men of many faiths.

Each after his own kind—each in the way appointed.

The men who died for us in France—they too, were of many faiths—but they gave their all—a willing sacrifice upon the Altar of Freedom. Today, where they fell, red poppies blow.

The men who died were of many faiths—but they gave their all for Freedom.

Can we who live in that Freedom and walk with our God today—can we do less than lend our dollars—to the Cause for which they gave their lives.

Men of many faiths—Men of America—
They died for you—
